Elandsfontein A H, Kempton Park Kempton Park at a glance Spartan Spartan is a formidable industrial area situated within the popular Johannesburg suburb of Kempton Park. Which has been a part of the City of Ekurhuleni Metropolitan Municipality since 2000. Kempton Park was originally recognized in 1903 when a wealthy farmer by the name of Karl Wolff decided that he would sub-divide a percentage of his Zuurfontein farm into residential areas, this area would be named Kempton and later Kempton Park and by 1952 the then Jan Smuts airport would be built on land nearby, which today is known as the OR Tambo International airport, which is within close proximity to both Kempton Park and Spartan. Industrial Hotspots Spartan is home to various nodes of industry and this is also largely due to its proximity to the OR Tambo International airport. Some of the main types of industry which operate out of Kempton Park include industrial valve and engineering supplies, fencing companies, auto industrial parts.
